'Profane' band name prompts edit

FESTIVAL Calgary's Sled Island Festival organizers said they will print edited versions of their event poster in the wake of public controversy over a profanity used on the advertisement.

Festival director Zakary Pashak said the manager of Kane's Harley Diner took offence to the name of a band printed on the poster, Holy F—, and removed the ad from her establishment.

"We're not reprinting new posters but the next batch of posters will be edited. I think it's an interesting public debate on censorship," he said, adding he wasn't aware of many other people offended.

Bishops against nuke reactors

VICTORIA HANDYSIDES
 Metro Canada

ENVIRONMENT Toxic waste, terrorist threats and depleted natural resources could become Alberta's future if nuclear reactors are erected in the province, a reality to which citizens are largely unaware, Alberta's Catholic Archbishop expressed yesterday.

"Of course, we're not scientists, we're not nuclear physicists, but it seems for every argument that is posed for establishing nuclear energy, there is a counter," Archbishop Richard Smith said yesterday.

The bishops feel environmental and ethical ramifications of establishing nuclear power in Alberta would be vast, including drawing a massive volume of water from the province's main arteries, and the problem of storing nuclear waste.

"We believe creation is God's work, and we have a responsibility to be effective stewards of it," he said.

"... would we be effective stewards of creation if that nuclear waste was stored for hundreds or thousands of years?"

Four bishops issued a list of concerns on what they feel is the impending threat of nuclear power.

Review of zoo sought

Incidents worry watchdog

KRISTA SYLVESTER
krista.sylvester@metronews.ca

A national zoo watchdog is calling for an independent review of the Calgary Zoo in the wake of what they call another "bad mistake" in a series of incidents dating back to 2007.

In a photo submitted to the Calgary Herald on Tuesday, a couple visiting the Zoo snapped a picture of a gorilla holding a knife.

The Calgary Zoo confirmed a zookeeper had dropped the knife in the enclosure without noticing until visitors alerted staff.

Julie Woodyer, campaign director for Zoocheck Canada, an independent animal protection agency, is calling for a full review of zoo operations.

"The Calgary Zoo is a national embarrassment. How many freak accidents will there be until something is done? A knife in the enclosure is a really, really bad mistake," she said.

Woodyer said they receive over 100 calls annually regarding Calgary Zoo incidents, compared to about 20 for other zoos.

"Let's put it this way, we're disgusted but we're not surprised given the number of incidents in the last couple years."

Calgary Zoo director of conservation Cathy Gaviller said she disagrees with the allegations.

"I don't think it's reasonable to connect a series of unrelated incidents that have no connection," she said, adding the zoo is accredited with the Canadian Association of Zoos and Aquariums.

"I think everywhere zookeepers are deeply sympathetic with the keeper because they know how easy it is to make a mistake like that," she said, referring to the knife incident.

Interchange needs more land

Businesses in area required for Deerfoot/Glenmore upgrade

AMY GREGSON
for Metro Calgary

Proposed construction on the Deerfoot/Glenmore interchange could see the province having to extract land from nearby businesses.

The additional land would be needed to add another bridge on the east side over Glenmore Trail. "We will have to require some additional land in that area to fit the interchange in," said Trent Bancarz, spokesperson for Alberta Transportation.

With mainly businesses in the area, Bancarz said the government hopes acquiring the additional land would not be difficult to achieve and that they do not have to go through an expropriation process.

Alberta Transportation said that the Deerfoot/Glenmore interchange is one of the busiest in Calgary and sees more than Additional land around the current Deerfoot Trail and Glenmore Trail interchange will be needed to accommodate the future expanded interchange.

130,000 vehicles per day.

The completed project would see four lanes going in either direction on Deerfoot Trail, realignment and improvements of loops and ramps and shoulder widening on both Deerfoot Trail and Glenmore Trail.

"We certainly recognize that there's a problem there. Hopefully this will solve some of them," said Bancarz.

Bancarz said that construction wouldn't start until 2010 and couldn't have begun earlier because of other construction projects on Glenmore.

The project is expected to cost $30 million and that work could be done during non-peak hours because it's in an industrial area, Bancarz said.

A public open house to get input on the design will be held today at the Glenmore Inn from 4 to 8 p.m.

However, Hancock would not comment on what the education system would look like in the future.

"We've got a steering committee who've dedicated a lot of time. It would be very unfortunate if I was to suggest what the outcomes should be before they've reached those conclusions."

Hancock did say that current priorities are increasing the number of high school graduates and ensuring teachers know the language of technology.

92-yr-old woman attacked for purse

CRIME Police are looking for two female suspects in what they are calling a cowardly act that left an elderly woman in hospital.

Insp. Rob Williams said a 92-year-old woman was walking in Southcentre Mall's parking lot around 9:30 a.m. when two women tried to grab her purse. When they couldn't get it, they pushed her to the ground and started punching and kicking her.

Williams said the woman suffered serious injuries, including a broken pelvis or fractured hip.

The two suspects fled in a small blue Honda Civic-type car, Williams said.

The two women are between 20 and 25 years old, one with a smaller build and the other heavier.

On cougars

- More than 30 cougar sightings have been reported in the Squamish area this month. Two of the animals have been killed by conservation officers.

ATTACK The mother who got in between her three-year-old daughter and a cougar in Squamish, B.C. said she is grateful her little girl suffered minor injuries only and sad that the animal is dead.

As Maureen Lee walked with her mother Maya in Fisherman's Park near the Squamish River on Tuesday night, a cougar approached the girl from behind and swiped at her.

Maureen Lee told Metro Canada yesterday that without thinking she grabbed Maya and stood between the girl and the animal.

"I knew that it was just a matter of seconds that he needed to kill her," Lee said. "I knew that any delay would mean her life."

"I did what I think any mother would do, I jumped between him and her and I held on to her."

The animal then walked away, leaving Maya with some minor wounds.

Lee added that Maya doesn't fully understand the danger she was in.

"She's a strong, intelligent and brave girl."

Calgary's transit system began operations on July 5th, 2009 as the Calgary Electric Railway. By December 1909, the system consisted of 28 kms of track served by 12 forty passenger electric street cars. This well received system served a rapidly growing pioneer city of 30,000 people.

After only three years of operation, the Calgary Municipal Railway (as it became known in 1910) expanded to 49 street-cars, operating over 80 kms of track, and carrying nearly 5 million passengers per year.

Former priest weds woman

Relationship roiled Catholic church

A former Roman Catholic priest and media celebrity who left the Catholic Church last month after he was photographed cuddling a woman on a Florida beach has married his girlfriend, local media reported yesterday.

Alberto Cutie, 40, who joined the Episcopal Church after the photos stoked debate over the Catholic celibacy requirement for priests, married 35-year-old Ruhama Buni Canellis on Tuesday in a civil ceremony, the Miami Herald reported. The couple avoided photographers Cutie, born in Puerto Rico of Cuban parents, was a charismatic preacher and religious celebrity. He became embroiled in a media frenzy last month after a Spanish-language magazine published photos of him in swim trunks, cuddling and kissing a woman on a beach in Florida.

Bill 44 creates ripple effect of other issues

Relating

Andrea

Earlier this month, a bill passed in Alberta enshrining gay rights into the province's human code. Celebrations were overshadowed, however, by a buried clause — a tiny but powerful traitor tumbling out of a rainbow-coloured Trojan horse.

Under section 11.1 of Bill 44, the Human Rights, Citizenship and Multiculturalism Amendment Act, Alberta teachers are now required to give formal notice to parents before teaching subjects dealing explicitly with religion, sexuality or sexual orientation. Parents can then pull their children out of these classes without academic penalty.

While I support parents being informed in advance of these lessons and having the ability to make such decisions, the introduction of such legalities can create a ripple effect of secondary issues.

Requiring formal, written consent before covering sexuality or sexual orientation, for example, suggests to a child there is something so improper and perverse about it that even teachers must obtain permission before discussing it.

On the web

It would also curtail the natural progression of class discussions and could cost students some very valuable lessons.

As well, if teachers must send out such advisories, wait for responses from every parent, determine whether or not to still proceed and, if so, (presumably) find alternative arrangements for children who cannot partake, it is expected that some teachers will simply opt for less contestable content.

It should be noted that before the passing of the bill, Alberta parents were already notified before their children partook in sex education classes. The biggest difference now is the intimidating legal threat that teachers can be brought before Alberta Human Rights tribunals and its subsequent effects.

This is not an explicit issue of sexuality or religion, but of a teacher's ability to do his or her job fearlessly, and the implicit effect this has on our children's attitudes toward such topics.

Women, girls need a room of their own

FourthWave

Canice
Leung

metronews.ca/fourthwave

As a kid, my favourite activity was to read children's encyclopedias; my favourite entry was on aboriginal vision quests. Boys are cast into the wilderness to meditate and discover their life direction; they emerge men of truth and purpose. (No mention of the female equivalent.)

As a high-schooler, I spewed my emotions into a well-guarded journal. In English class, I read Virginia Woolf's A Room Of One's Own. (Her theory: "A woman must have money and a room of her own if she is to write.") I wondered if self-reflection was my own rite of passage — a notion explored in She's Shameless, an anthology to be released next week by Shameless, a Toronto-based alt-magazine for young women.

The essays are honest, but as co-editors Stacey May Fowles and Megan Griffith-Greene wrote in the book's introduction, "This is not an after-school special."

A pregnant 16-year-old contemplates, then rejects, abortion; a fourth-grader's French teacher peers down her shirt; a virginity is lost to a slimy married father twice her age — but that's not the point.

The voices of young women are rarely heard. Adults, often men, are invited on TV to wring their hands about teen-girl crises (pregnancy, anorexia, depression, promiscuity) and asked how to "fix" these problems. "Grow up, be smart, take responsibility," but teens aren't given that agency, which is what makes She's Shameless remarkable. The essays neither condone nor condemn; some contributors display regret, but their bios tell of eventual successes as "proud feminist mamas," university graduates, artists.

As it turns out, a writer shared my vision quest. Teri

Vlassopoulos on making zines, which quieted her restless thoughts: "If they're a little embarrassing or if there's some bad spelling in there, it's OK ... What matters is the importance of having tangible evidence and amassing proof. We should make things that we can keep around for later, even if just to burn them."

Some feminists believe women are absent from history books (and kids' encyclopedias) because they were written by men. If that's true, greater the reason to write.

Canice Leung is a former editor of Ryerson University feminist magazine McClung's, copy editor at Metro, ardent feminist and loudmouth.

Obama unveils reforms

Changes to U.S. regulation meant to prevent future collapses

President Barack Obama laid out his vision for recrafting U.S. financial regulation yesterday, vowing to halt "a cascade of mistakes ... over the course of decades" that eroded bank and market oversight.

The Obama plan, under development for six months, next goes to the U.S. Congress for debate, where more than a dozen committee hearings are scheduled between now and mid-July.

The plan takes on some tough jobs, such as forcing large financial firms to boost their capital cushions and regulating over-the-counter derivatives and securitized instruments.

But it only partially tackles a task once seen as vital — a top-to-bottom revamp of financial regulatory agencies.

No merger of the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) and the Commodity Futures Trading Commission (CFTC) is being proposed, for instance, due largely to political obstacles.

Opposition

Powerful lobbying groups for corporate America were quick to pounce on the president's plan after it was released. Conservative House Republicans are offering a rival plan.

A contentious centerpiece of the plan is vesting the Federal Reserve with new powers over "systemic risk" in the economy with the aim of preventing future disasters like September's collapse of former Wall Street giant Lehman Brothers and the taxpayer bailout of mega-insurer American International Group.

The government would be also empowered to seize and unwind large, troubled companies that are not banks.

As well, Obama wants to beef up regulation of money market mutual funds, credit rating agencies and hedge funds, which would be required to register with the SEC.

Business in brief

AUTO Chrysler Group LLC said yesterday it will resume production of vehicles in seven North American assembly plants by the end of the month, the first large-scale resumption of production since the Fiat SpA-led company acquired Chrysler assets earlier in June.

CHAPTER 11 Eddie Bauer Holdings Inc. filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection yesterday. According to a court filing, the outdoor apparel retailer is planning to sell nearly all its assets to Rainier Holdings LLC. The company blamed its debt load, citing concern it might not be able to comply with conditions attached to its $225-million US senior term loan facility.

Russia High hopes for Opel

Workers assemble trucks at the GAZ car factory in Nizhny Novgorod yesterday. GAZ, along with Russia's largest lender Sberbank and Canadian car-parts group Magna, is on track to buy GM's German carmaker Opel. GAZ is the industrial partner in the deal, which Russia hopes will bring in Opel's expertise and a chance of a technical breakthrough in its ailing car industry.

GM faces backlash over dealer closings

AUTO General Motors' controversial decision to force the closing of hundreds of dealerships is triggering a backlash from store owners who are now contemplating legal action at the same time consumers are expressing outrage about losing service.

One GM dealer confirmed yesterday he has hired legal counsel, and a small group of retailers may fight the automaker over pending closures and an alleged lack of fair compensation.

"We've got a litigation team looking into this," said Bob Slessor, president of Robert Slessor Pontiac Buick GMC in Grimsby, Ont.

A public petition calling for GM to reconsider the closures has now topped 2,300 names, with people lambasting the company for forcing them to travel long distances for future service and for unilaterally closing popular stores.

Wireless startups ready for fight

COMPETITION After months of promises and carefully worded statements, the country's three newest wireless companies have taken the gloves off as they prepare to compete for a slice of Canada's $12.7-billion wireless sector.

During a telecom conference yesterday in Toronto, the chief executives of Public Mobile, Globalive Wireless and DAVE Wireless traded barbs as they attempted to explain why their respective business plans stood the greatest chance of success.

All three plan to launch services in various cities across the country later this year or early 2010.

Alek Krstajic, the CEO of Public Mobile, said his company is proposing to go after the roughly 30 per cent of Canadians who don't own a cellphone.

DAVE's backers have paid $243 million for spectrum in major cities across the country.

Globalive, meanwhile, is proposing to launch two wireless brands to capture different market segments.

NHL goes for glitz

League awards to be handed out tonight in Las Vegas

Sin City becomes Shiny City tonight.

In a move it hopes will glitz up its image and bring a little more attention to the league, the NHL's annual awards gala will unfold in Las Vegas, a city with plenty of vice, but very little ice. The hardware handout will take place at the Palms Casino Resort and there will be a little hip-hop and Hollywood mixed with hockey as the game's brightest stars try to outshine the neon on the Strip.

"They want buzz," presenter Jeremy Roenick said of the league in a recent interview with a Vegas newspaper. "Las Vegas, there's no bigger buzz you're going to get for entertainment."

Even when the awards

"Las Vegas, there's no bigger buzz you're going to get." Jeremy Roenick show was held in Toronto, the league always brought together an eclectic group of entertainers and presenters. This year will be no different and no less puzzling.

Chaka Khan and Robin Thicke — whose father Alan has hosted these awards in the past — will be among the entertainers. Among those expected to walk the red carpet and make appearances during the show are Snoop Dogg (huge fan of the Anaheim Ducks) and Michael Bubl  (minority owner of the WHL's Vancouver Giants), along with actors William Fichtner (Prison Break) and Tricia Helfer (Burn Notice).

There will of course be the usual array of impressive hockey legends on hand to help with the presentations, including Doug Gilmour, Mark Messier, Stan Mikita, Sergei Fedorov and Brian Leetch, but the focus will be on the players up for awards.

Again this year, Alexander Ovechkin is expected to need a trailer to take home his prizes. Already assured of the Rocket Richard Trophy for leading the league with 56 goals, he is the favourite to repeat as the Hart Trophy winner and Pearson Award winner.

Bethpage offers challenge to U.S. Open field

GOLF Players Championship winner Henrik Stenson summed up the challenges facing the field at Bethpage Black in the U.S. Open starting today in three words.

"Hard. Long. Wet," the Swede said.

The terse assessment was corroborated and elaborated upon by many of the top players among the 156 starters.

"The difficulty of Bethpage is how long it is," said Australian Geoff Ogilvy, the 2006 winner at Winged Foot.

At 7,426 yards off its back tees, the brawny public course at N.Y.'s Bethpage State Park is the longest layout used for a U.S. Open.

Persistent rain over the last six weeks has saturated the course and showers are forecast for the next four days on a track lengthened 200 yards since 2002, when Tiger Woods won the Open here. That makes for meagre roll on tee shots.

"The golf course is playing long," Woods said about his practice rounds. "They moved the tees back. I don't feel like I've gotten any shorter since 2002, but man, I'm just wearing out my long irons." REUTERS

What dad doesn't like wings? And they go especially well with beer. Serve these grilled wings with grilled potato wedges, veggies and dip for an easy and relaxed meal.

These recipes are from Gathering Around the Grill: Inspirational Menus and Grilling Ideas for Family and Friends by Andrea Witzel & Kris Schumacher (published by Broil King). This cookbook offers 21 menus for occasions throughout the year, lots of tips, grilling information and, of course, recipes.

Grilled Chicken Wings with Roquefort Dip and Veggies

If time permits, marinate wings up to one day ahead in the refrigerator. If you enjoy a Buffalo-style wing, toss wings in hot sauce after grilling or serve with the sauce as a dip. Makes four servings.

INGREDIENTS:

- 3 lbs (1.5 kg) chicken wings
- Marinade:
- 1/3 cup (75 ml) vegetable oil
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1 tsp (5 ml) each: Chili powder, dried oregano leaves and kosher salt

- 1/4 tsp (1 ml) cayenne (or more to taste)
- 2 tbsp (30 ml) red wine vinegar

METHOD:

Cut off and discard wing tips, then cut each wing at the joint to make two pieces. In large bowl, whisk together vegetable oil, garlic, chili powder, oregano, salt, cayenne and vinegar. Add wings and toss to coat.

When ready to cook, drain wings and discard marinade. Lightly brush grill on one side of barbecue with oil. Preheat barbecue on high, then reduce heat to medium and cook wings, turning to set grill marks, about 15 minutes. Move wings up to upper rack and continue cooking 15 to 20 minutes or until cooked through and tender.

Roquefort Dip and Veggies

If time permits make up to one day ahead, cover and refrigerate until serving time. If this is too strong a flavour for kids, try a Caesar salad dressing as a dip. Makes about 2/3 cup (150 ml) dip.

INGREDIENTS:

- 1/2 cup (125 ml) mayonnaise
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1 tbsp (15 ml) grated

All you need for Father's Day

Almost every guy loves wings, a great companion for a cold beer. Try this meal for Father's Day.

onion

- 1 tsp chopped fresh thyme
- 1 tbsp (15 ml) red wine vinegar
- 1/3 cup (75 ml) crumbled Roquefort or other blue cheese, crumbled
- Cut vegetables: Carrots, celery and red, yellow and orange pepper strips

METHOD:

Stir together dip ingredients, mayonnaise, garlic, onion, thyme, vinegar and cheese.

Grilled Potato Wedges:

- Scrub 4 medium potatoes. Cut into wedges and toss with 2 tbsp (30 ml) olive oil and pinch each salt and pepper. Place in grill basket over medium-high to medium heat and grill, turning or shaking pan often until golden brown and tender, about 30 minutes.

Sodium: Don't just blame the nuts

As for salted peanuts, according to the Canadian Nutrient File, salted, oil-roasted peanuts contain 117 mg of sodium per Food Guide Serving (1/4 cup or 60 ml) — that's less sodium than you'll find in a slice of bread or a bagel. And a serving of unsalted peanuts has no sodium at all. NEWS CANADA

The love of food is a beautiful thing. The experience of eating at a restaurant that not only serves wonderful food, but also takes pride in preparing it with passion, is very enjoyable.

I ordered the the Lunch Grill ($10) at Anju.

Whether I'm eating at a burger joint or a posh restaurant, if the food is cooked with delight, along with great ingredients, my dining experience is truly complete. In fact, this is exactly what many of the restaurants in Calgary are lacking.

Every now and then, however, out of the multitudes of restaurants in the city, a gem emerges. Anju is one of them. Not only is the décor subtle and tasteful at this Korean grill, but the menu is as well. Offering Korean food with a North American twist, Anju's menu boasts well-priced, delicious meals plated with an eye for beauty.

I ordered the Lunch Grill ($10), which came with rice, lemongrass chicken and a side salad of Asian pear and spring mix in an interesting and spicy red pepper sauce. Although the salad was a bit heavy on the dressing, everything was fresh and delicious. My lunch buddy ordered the Lettuce Wraps ($14), which looked like floral artwork and apparently tasted the same.

Anju is a restaurant with great food and décor, and the wait staff and chefs play a huge role in the success of the place as well. I glanced behind me as the chef was grilling my chicken. From the content, concentrated look on his face, I knew the food would be, if nothing else, made with pride and care, and those are great qualities to start with.

Father's Day GIFT GUIDE

SPECIAL FEATURES EDITOR: STEPHANIE.BOMBA@METRONEWS.CA

Gifts for the tech lover

RAFAEL BRUSILOV
for Metro Canada

Everyone knows dads love their gadgets, and with Father's Day just around the corner, the pressure is on to find the perfect gift.

These days more people are looking for ways to secure that "wow!" potential without breaking the bank — that's why this year, Metro is featuring both fancy and frugal picks to fit any budget.

CAMERAS

Canon PowerShot SD780 IS digital camera, $299

Sleek and sexy, Canon's newest Powershot is light and skinny yet powerful, with an optical stabilizer and 3x optical zoom lens attached to a 12.1 megapixel sensor. It also shoots HD movies and has an HDMI slot for easy playback output onto your HD TV. Pick it up and play with it in a store — you'll understand right away why it just feels "right" to the touch.

Canon Digital Rebel T1i digital SLR camera, $999

Canon's new face-melting SLR smashes the term "entry-level SLR" into meaninglessness with a 15.1 megapixel sensor, DIGIC 4 Image Processor, full HD video capture at up to 1920x1080 resolution, a large three-inch LCD with anti-reflective and scratch-resistant coatings. SLR cameras use much larger silicon sensors than smaller, point-and-shoot cameras, which is part of the reason why pictures taken with an SLR look so much clearer and more vibrant. With its HD video capabilities and outstanding photo quality, attached to an entry-level price under $1,000, Canon's T1i is a great buy for a dad who wants to graduate to a "real" camera.

TVS

Panasonic TC-P42G10 plasma television, $1,299

A plasma television that scored a big hit with reviewers, the 42-inch G10 is a great bargain as an HD TV that is full of features and has a surprisingly high level of quality for its price tag. True black colour reproduction and overall colour accuracy is very good and the TV uses less power than most other plasmas in its category.

LG 47LH90 LCD television, $2,899

An intelligent, luxurious HD 1080p TV for the discerning dad, LG's 47-inch LH90 has an LED backlit panel for increased clarity and colour detail. The TV's 240Hz TruMotion technology drastically eliminates on-screen motion blur when watching sports or gaming and an intelligent sensor inside the TV actually adjusts the picture to optimize it for the viewing conditions in the room. With a contrast ratio of 2 million to 1, expect dad's eyeballs to get dazzled for a good, long time.

MOBILE PHONES
LG Rumor 2, $269 without a plan or $39.95 with a three-year plan from Bell

Despite all the hoopla about the newest Apple and Blackberry phones, LG's Rumor 2 sneaks in with a plethora of equivalent features for a very attractive price. Featuring a slick, sliding-faceplate design that sports a full QWERTY keyboard, the phone has Bluetooth Stereo, a 1.3 megapixel camera and built-in music player with up to 16 GB of expandable memory.

The YUBZ Retro Mobile Handset, right, and the Vuzix iWear AV310 Widescreen video eyewear are two out-of-the-box gifts you could give your dad on Sunday.

Apple iPhone 3G 32GB, $299 with a three-year contract

The shrewd marketers at Apple are releasing their newest iPhone juggernaut tomorrow — just in time for Father's Day — and it does appear to live up to the hype. Letting you shoot VGA video or just take pictures with its new 3 megapixel camera, the phone is also purportedly the fastest iPhone yet for web-surfing and email.

OTHER COOL STUFF
YUBZ Retro Mobile Handset, $44.95

A nifty throwback to the times when you only had to hold a receiver up to your face, the handset plugs directly into your mobile phone for old-school talking. Features a volume slider and one-touch answering, and it's purported to reduce radiation hitting your face as you talk by 95 per cent.

Vuzix iWear AV310 Widescreen video eyewear, $249

Featuring a 16:9 widescreen display that simulates a 52-inch screen, the Vuzix AV310 looks like something right out of Star Trek and is sure to be a distinctive gift for a dad who wants something none of his friends probably have yet. The glasses' adapter can plug right into an iPod or any other video device and lets you privately watch up to 11 hours of video on a single AA battery.

Wake me up before you glo-glo

The electrifying colours of day-glo, last seen back in the '80s in graffiti art and lighting up MTV in videos from pop music acts like WHAM!, are back for another retina-searing blast.

The return of DayGlo colours in fashion is just another stop on the current '80s comeback tour in pop culture.

These blinding hues are anointed cool again by Marc Jacobs, the most influential designer on the planet right now. He dipped into the electric Kool Aid liberally earlier this year with the relaunch of the Stephen Sprouse collection for Louis Vuitton — a dazzling collection of accessories splattered with neon graffiti by the renowned '80s New York artist.

And while this spring you can find any number of accessories and clothing in "the caffeine of colours," as one Toronto artist describes it, expect this trend to glow all year. The recent showing of fall collections in New York indicated designers are turning up the neon wattage also next season.

Lest you think this is a trend strictly for kiddies born after the '80s. One woman caused quite the stir last recently when she walked into the tents at LG Fashion Week.

Jonas Brothers strike again

Boy band delivers second album in less than a year

Jonas Brothers

Album: Lines, Vines and Trying Times
Label: Hollywood/Universal
Rating: ●●●●

BOY BANDS

HAVE to strike fast and often. The window's small, after all. One day you wake up to find your fanbase has left adolescence. So we have a new Jonas Brothers CD, just 10 months after the boys delivered their last. And golly gee, it's just in time for Nick, Joe and Kevin's new TV show (didn't the Monkees have a fire-pole, too?) The odd thing about this album is how different it sounds from the last — not necessarily more mature, just different. Definitely a step up from the pseudo-punk sound of A Little Bit Longer, the new CD takes a poppier turn, flirting with classic R&B and even venturing into country. Songs like Hey Baby, Much Better and Keep It Real (from the TV show) are more than admirable. There are some laughers, though, especially the ridiculous pairing with Common on Don't Charge Me for the Crime, a possible career killer for the hip-hop star.

Graham Rockingham/for Metro Canada

Spinnerette

Album: Spinnerette
Label: Anthem/Universal
Rating: ●●●●

BRODY DALLE

HIT it big with her snarling hardcore punk band the Distillers, not to mention her marriage to Queens of the Stone Age frontman Josh Homme, so all eyes are on her new project, Spinnerette. The band's debut doesn't resemble her past — the record is a straight up pop album, albeit with some aggressive guitars and brash vocals. It's in the same vein as Queens, though more polished and radio-friendly. That's not saying it's bad; there are a number of infectious tunes, but it would have been nice to see Dalle keep pushing her musical boundaries.

Bryan Borzykowski/for Metro Canada

The strength of this album lies in the songs. The pleading chorus of Let Her Go lifts an otherwise standard father-daughter quick-step into a powerful track. Gone With the Morning Sun demonstrates commercial potential, while Alone offers Holly at her vulnerable best and the acoustic centerpiece, Three Days In Bed (With a Stranger), shows a woman in control. Williams proves, like Rosanne Cash before her, that she's a songwriter to be taken seriously on her own terms.

Graham Rockingham/for Metro Canada

Holly Williams

Album: Here With Me
Label: Mercury/Universal
Rating: ●●●●½

THE GRAND-DAUGHTER

of Hank Williams proves the strength of the bloodline on her second solo CD, successfully keeping one boot in alt-country while carefully testing more mainstream waters with the other. Holly has a strong but unremarkable voice.

The Proclaimers

Album: Notes & Rhymes
Label: Universal
Rating: ●●●½

THE PROCLAIMERS

ARE Craig and Charlie Reid, the identical

Scottish twins who scored a monster hit in the early '90s with I'm Gonna Be (500 Miles). Over the past eight years they've maintained a loyal fanbase with a succession of consistently well-crafted albums showcasing their love of rockabilly, blue-eyed soul, classic R&B and soapy melodrama. The twins tend to lay it on heavy sometimes. And it can be unsettling, especially when they're crooning traditional country songs with names like It Was Always So Easy (To Find An Unhappy Woman). The twins are best when trying to pull off soaring Righteous Brothers harmonies on songs like Love Can Move Mountains, but they're attempts at enlightened social commentary (I Know, Free Market, Wages of Sin) are too often clumsy and heavy handed.

Mos Def

Album: The Ecstacy
Label: Downtown/Fontana
North Rating: ●●●●

DESPITE WHAT

MOST people think, Mos Def isn't a great rapper. Or at least he hasn't been since 1999, when he released the spectacular Black on Both Sides. However, The Ecstacy proves that it's not that he doesn't have the talent, it's just been hiding for the past decade. He misses the mark on a couple tracks — like on Pretty Danger — but otherwise it looks like Mos Def is, finally, back.

fans were shocked when the legendary indie act reunited in 2005, but perhaps they should be more surprised that the trio has released two fantastic albums since. Their latest is another incredibly focused effort that's filled with the same fuzzy distortion and brooding melodies that made them popular so many years ago.

Twitter goes literary with Ulysses

NETWORKING Twitter, the social networking site favored by some celebrities, has gone highbrow with a performance from James Joyce's 1922 novel Ulysses.

Two Ulysses enthusiasts, videogame designer Ian Bogost from the Georgia Institute of Technology and colleague Ian McCarthy, wanted to use the site in a culturally interesting way rather than just as a service that lets users send 140-character messages, known as tweets.

They came up with idea of re-creating a chapter from Ulysses on Twitter.

They chose chapter 10, Wandering Rock, which is famous for showing the interlocking events of 19 characters walking through central Dublin on their daily business. Bogost and McCarthy registered 54 of the novel's characters as Twitter users and adapted the chapter in a large series of 140-character-or-less first-person statements, using a specially created software to automate a performance.

On June 16, or Blooms-day, the day the action in the novel takes place in 1904, these characters all sent tweets about what they were doing at the correct fictional times.

Bogost said the performance went smoothly, although a few technical hiccups meant some characters were unable to take part.

Gays wary of Brüno

Activists say film could reinforce negative stereotypes

U.S. gay activists are worried that comedian Sacha Baron Cohen's new film, Brüno, could reinforce negative stereotypes about homosexuals just as they are making gains in the fight for rights such as same-sex marriage.

Cohen, who scored a surprise hit in 2006 with Borat: Cultural Learnings of America for Make Benefit Glorious Nation of Kazakhstan, portrays a flamboyant gay Austrian fashion reporter in the new film that premiered yesterday in London and opens in North America on July 10.

The studio releasing Brüno says the film's intent is to satirize homophobia, but some gay advocates are wary.

"We do feel the intentions of the filmmakers are in the right place — satire of this form can unmask homophobia — but at the same time it can heighten people's discomfort with our community," said Rashad Robinson, senior director of media programs for the Gay and Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation.

Comedian Sacha Baron Cohen arrives as his latest silver screen avatar for the Paris premiere of Brüno.

With that in mind, GLAAD asked in vain for Universal Pictures, the studio behind Brüno, to add a message from Cohen addressing the importance of gay rights and tolerance.

Universal says in a statement it believes most moviegoers will understand the film's "positive intentions. Brüno uses provocative comedy to powerfully shed light on the absurdity of many kinds of intolerance and ignorance, including homophobia," the studio said.

The movie comes out as

U.S. same-sex couples have won the right to wed in six states amid a fierce debate on gay marriage that has seen California voters approve a ban on such marriages.

Cohen has a huge fan base. Men and women flocked to Borat, a fake documentary about a Kazakh journalist traveling across the United States that used comedy to expose bigotry. It earned $128 million at U.S. and Canadian box offices and $133 million in other countries.

Like its predecessor, Brüno is a mock documentary that covers the fashion reporter after he loses his job in Austria and goes to America looking to become a celebrity. Brüno wears mesh shirts, talks with a lisp and has a penchant for dropping his pants. REUTERS

More actors join Red Dawn remake

FILM Josh Peck and Adrienne Palicki have been cast in the remake of 1984's Red Dawn, set to begin filming in September.

They join the already cast Chris Hemsworth in the story of a group of teenagers who form an insurgency after their town is invaded by Chinese and Russian soldiers.

From Battlestar to Heroes

ROLE Battlestar Galactica alumnus Rick Worthy is joining the cast of another sci-fi drama. Worthy is in negotiations for a recurring role on NBC's Heroes next season, playing the new partner of Matt Parkman (Greg Grunberg): an experienced and capable Los Angeles cop.

LiLo-SamRo saga continues

HOT/COLD Lindsay Lohan has split from Samantha Ronson — again, female-first.co.uk reports.

The actress — who reunited with her DJ lover earlier this month after a high-profile breakup — was reportedly dumped by text message after the pair had a blazing row about Ronson's friend Nicole Richie on Monday night.

A source told website E! Online: "Nicole refuses even to be in the same room as Lindsay and Lindsay was furious when Sam was invited to a party Nicole held for a mutual friend and she wasn't."

"Sam went to the party and it really upset Lindsay."

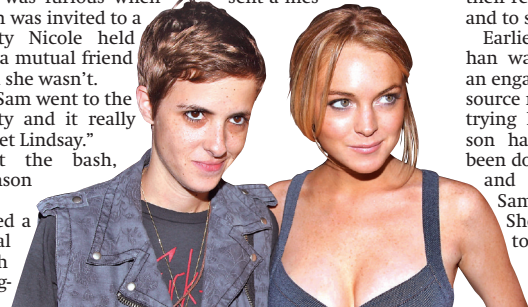

At the bash, Ronson enjoyed a meal with pregnant Richie and reportedly sent a message to Lohan telling her their relationship was over and to stop contacting her.

Earlier this month, Lohan was spotted wearing an engagement ring, and a source revealed Lohan was trying hard to keep Ronson happy: "Lindsay has been doing so much better and has been giving Samantha her space. She is really dedicated to making it work."

VIRGO
AUG 24-SEPT 22

Recent successes may have been to your credit but give some to your team. Say nice things about your colleagues now and they'll be there for you later.

PISCES
FEB 19-MARCH 20

You may think you know about somebody's private life, but it's just the half of it. Focus on your own affairs or others may soon be gossiping about you.
